

WHAT OUR CLIENTS SAY

RMIG is the world's largest manufacturer of perforated metal. With sites in 13 European countries, the company employs over 500 people with 38 working out of their base in Warrington.

Previously, the UK plant had relied on internal resources to comply with their health and safety practices. However, in 2009 when the business found itself going through some large scale adjustments to its operating procedures, it became apparent they needed more support than they were currently receiving.

After a process of elimination with several companies, RMIG started talking to Ellis Whittam about the health and safety services they could provide. Hugh McLay, Operations Manager at RMIG, comments: "After appointing a new Health & Safety Officer, we felt that the business urgently needed to carry out a full audit of processes and procedures. We appointed Ellis Whittam to initially undertake the audit and soon realised we also needed their support and expertise to ensure we continued to achieve the high standards required."

"The service we receive from Ellis Whittam has enabled us to greatly improve the quality and content of the health and safety policies and procedures that we have in place," continues Hugh. "They have also been able to offer really valuable, bespoke advice and support on a number of recent issues. For example, after a recent accident in one of our car parks, Andrew, our allocated consultant from EW, met with RMIG staff and the Health & Safety Inspector on site. His ability to speak the same 'jargon' helped to find a quick solution."

"The main advantage, apart from the amount of money and time we are now saving, is the peace of mind we feel we have thanks to the excellent support and guidance they offer."

RMIG is also making full use of Ellis Whittam's Health & Safety e-learning system. All new employees are required to complete a number of courses. Due to the online nature of the system, the company is able to access all the information they require about employees' progress and scores with the training at the touch of a button.
